Would You Believe:

That the first explorer of Texas may have been Chinese? And that he may have come here more than 2,000 years before Christ?

Historians say that Alonzo Alvarez de Pineda was the first European to travel Texas when he came in 1519. However, John Davis of the Institute of Texan Cultures in San Antonio believes that there is evidence that what is now known as "Texas" may have been explored centuries before.

He cites Shan Hai King, a Chinese history compiled about 2,250 B.C. which tells of overseas explorations from China. Some scholars, matching land forms, mineral outcroppings, and wildlife, place one of the Chinese routes through the Big Bend country of Texas. Indian legends and discovery of Chinese artifacts in the area lend credibility to this theory.

ROCKDALE

Rockdale city councilmen and constable Spud Caywood are named in a suit for damages filed by Nicholas Esquibel Jr., former dog catcher here who sought a job as a police patrolman and was not hired. White's Auto Store in Hearne was robbed of possibly $200 shortly after noon last week by three persons. They left the store and entered their automobile they parked in front of the store but it would not start. Another woman was in the process of pushing off the car when police units surrounded the car and arrested them.

Pollution Kills Fish

BELTON

Raw sewerage, the wrong amount of rain and the drastic change in temperature in Nolan Creek are credited with the killing of hundreds of fish in the creek. The Bell County Health Department will post signs warning fishermen that the creek is polluted and there may be danger in eating fish caught from it.

Suit Seeks Reassessment

SOMERVILLE

Pre-trial proceedings were held last week in district court in the civil suit for property owners against the Somerville ISD board of equalization. If a writ of mandamus is granted the board will be forced to reassess property that it previously assessed in September proceedings. The writ would also show that the proceedings of and surrounding the September meeting of the board were wrong and illegal.

Great Armada's Sails To Salute Bicentennial

By Jack Cavanaugh

NEW YORK

Reuter--The most spectacular armada of sailing vessels since the days when clipper ships ruled the seas will sail up the Hudson River to New York on the Fourth of July in a maritime salute of the nation's 200th birthday.

In all, more than 200 ships of varying sizes and shapes from at least 35 nations will join in the procession. With ensigns flying and huge sails billowing in the wind, the square-riggers will sail 20 miles from New York's upper bay to Spuyten Duyvil at the northern tip of Manhattan.

Like ghosts out of the maritime past, barques, brigantines, schooners, sloops, and other 20th century sea-going anachronisms will sail majestically past more than 5,000 spectator boats and between 50 and 60 naval vessels from a score of countries.

The non-profit organization arranging the show expects more than five million people to watch the show from the New York and New Jersey shorelines, rooftops, piers, and Manhattan skyscrapers. President Ford is expected to view what is formally called "Operation Sail" from the aircraft carrier Forrestal, which will serve as the reviewing ship.

An estimated 25,000 sailors will crew the vintage vessels, most of them naval cadets who use the sailing ships for training purposes. Nationality committees have been set up to seek accommodation for the visiting seamen in homes in the New York metropolitan area.

Nearly five years in the making, the Hudson River spectacular is expected to cost more than 70 million dollars, most of which will be borne by foreign governments.

The stars of the show will be 14 "tall ships," a classic and rare, sailing vessel.

Sponsors of "Operation Sail" are hopeful that the Soviet Union will also send two tall ships, but so far have not received a formal commitment.

The largest tall ship committed is Spain's Juan Sebastian de Elcano, a four-masted 370-foot topsail schooner. The oldest will be the Gazela Primeiro, a 170-foot barquentine from the Philadelphia Museum and built in 1883.

Before taking part in "Operation Sail," about 100 of the ships will take part in one or more of three legs of the trans-Atlantic race organized by the British Sail Training Association. The race will start in Plymouth, England, on May 2 and end in Newport, Rhode Island, on June 29, with the ships then proceeding to New York.

About 100 smaller vessels will be shipped across the Atlantic by freighter.

To clear the way for the vast armada, the Coast Guard will close the port of New York to commercial traffic on the Fourth of July. At 10 a.m. the fleet will weigh anchor and, escorted by Coast Guard launches, begin its parade from the Verrazano Bridge at Staten Island up the Hudson, beneath the George Washington Bridge to Spuyten Duyvil. From there, the ships will move to berths throughout the port. For the next three days, along with the naval vessels, they will be open to the public.

So far, the armada includes 80 ships from West Germany, 60 from Britain, 15 from Poland and 12 from France. Other countries sending vessels include Italy, Norway, Denmark, Chile, Colombia, Argentina, Romania, Japan, and Portugal. The host ship will be the Eagle, a former German training ship which was claimed by the U. S. as a war reparation in 1946. The Eagles is currently a training ship at the Coast Guard academy in New London, Connecticut.

Money seems to have been no object on the part of foreign governments in sending the U. S. a novel birthday present.

Frank Braynard, a maritime author and historian who has been the major driving force behind Operation Sail, says Japan is spending $3 million to refit the four-master steel barque, Nippon Maru.

"This armada will be more fun," Braynard says. "For one thing, we'll have the Sir Winston Churchill." The Sir Winston Churchill is a 135-foot British schooner with a crew of 55-44 of them women.

"It is definitely a 'she' ship," he said.

CTCOG Head Resigning From Job

Temple Mayor Dr. David Bandy, president of the Central Texas Council of Governments, has announced that Charles A. Cass, executive director of CTCOG, has resigned effective April 4, 1976, to enter private business.

Mayor Bandy further indicated that the COG will continue operation as in the past and the executive committee will be responsible for naming a new executive director. The matter will be discussed in detail at the next COG executive committee meeting, March 25, 12 noon, in Gatesville at the National Guard Armory.

Traffic Deaths Show Increase

AUSTIN

Figures released today by the Texas Department of Public Safety show that 1975 traffic deaths in Texas rose 13 percent over 1974, but the toll fell 1263 short of the all-time record set in 1973.

Colonel Wilson E. Speir, director of DPS, said a total of 3,429 persons lost their lives last year in 2,945 fatal accidents. The figure compares to 3,046 who died in 2,626 fatal acci-idents during 1974 and 3,692 who were killed in 1973's 3,074 fatal mishaps.

Speir said the traffic death rate per 100-million vehicle miles was 4.054 last year -- up from 3.9 rate in 1974 but under the 1973 death rate of 4.6.

Considering all types of traffic accidents in Texas, Speir said there were 34,402 more total accidents in 1975 than in 1974, and 4,370 more than in 1973.

Speir said the largest increase in deaths occurred in cities over 5,000 population -- up 17 percent over 1974.

Deaths in towns of less than 5,000 decreased by 0.3 percent, while rural deaths increased by 12 percent.

The DPS director said the sharp rise in deaths and accidents is due in part to a large increase in total driving over 1974. Last year Texans and visitors drove 84.575 billion miles compared to 78.290 billion miles driven in 1974 and 80.615 in 1973. Total driving fell drastically in 1974 due to the impact of the national energy crisis.

Speir noted that even though 1975 mileage was well above 1973 figures, and even though there were more total accidents in 1974 than in 1973, the 55 mile speed limit apparently made a sizable contribution to the reduction of 263 deaths when compared to 1973's record toll.

"While voluntary compliance with the 55 mile speed limit is not as good as it should be, traffic continues to move slower than it did in 1973 when the speed limit was 70," Speir said.

Application For Officers Awaits OK

An application for funds for a county probation officer and criminal investigator was officially signed by County Judge O. B. Harden and County Attorney Charles Smith Thursday, and now awaits approval by area and state officials.

Harden said the application will be acted upon by the Central Texas Council of Governments at a meeting today (Monday) then will be sent to Austin for approval.

Harden expects the grant to be effective late this fall or the beginning of next year.

The county attorney had asked for these two officials through recommendations by a Milam grand jury earlier this year.

What Others Say

Small Favors...

Since the days of Lenin, the Communist party in Russia and across the world has accepted the fundamental doctrine of the dictatorship of the proletariat. This doctrine, which Lenin used to justify the October Revolution in 1917, holds that it is a waste of time to try to win a majority vote to make changes and that workers must seize and keep power for the general good, regardless of the wishes of the general public.

For the first time since 1917, the Communist party leaders of Italy, France, and Romania have challenged that doctrine--and in the bear's mouth, the 25th meeting of the Soviet party congress. The congress has always been a gathering of the faithful from all over the world to hear the word set forth from the Kremlin and say amen in unison. This congress followed the custom in so far as affairs of the Soviet Union were concerned.

Premier Alexei Kosygin presented a new five-year plan much like those that have gone before and, though they have generally failed to meet their goals, he called for production to increase by 38 to 42 percent a year in heavy industry, by 14 to 17 percent in agriculture, by 30 to 32 percent in consumer goods. He conceded that "Light industry and other industrial branches on which consumer goods depend have not yet lived up to requirements," but reminded the 5,000 delegates that "The capitalist world has been in the grip of a grave economic crisis, an organic disease of the capitalist system aggravated by the protracted militarization of the economy." No one mentioned the fact that Moscow's military expenditures last year totaled $141 billion to $94 billion for the U.S.

Leonid Brezhnev, who in past months was thought to be seriously ill and perhaps expected to accept retirement amid accolades, got the accolades all right--being credited for "excessive modesty and brilliant talent, his spiritual beauty and personal charm." But after the five-hour speech and re-election as party general secretary, Brezhnev emerged clearly as the boss to a new and unchallenged degree. Boss in the Kremlin--but in a Kremlin no longer boss of the party world-wide.

At this 25th party congress, the non-Russian Communists spoke out in Moscow as they have been speaking out at home. Despite Soviet warnings against the dangers of "opportunism" and of "squeezing Marxism into national compartments," the leaders of four Western delegations challenged the Soviet claim to set policies for other countries and questioned the fundamental doctrine of the dictatorship of the proletariat. Italy's Enrico Berlinguer, France's Gaston Plissonnier, Britain's Gordon McLennan, and Spain's Dolores Ibarruri rose up to insist on their right to form their own policies and to maintain the concept of a multi-party system in their own countries. Yugoslavia concurred. With more risk than the others, President Ceausescu of Romania--in the shadow of the bear--told the congress that each Communist party should be free to follow its own road to socialism.

Notably, the non-Russian Communist leaders attacking the control from Moscow are all members of parties that are edging toward some success at the polls. Only Portugal's Alvaro Cunhal, who has lost out in Portugal, and Gus Hall, leader of the tiny, never successful American Communist Party, rose up to defend Moscow's right to rule. Gus Hall said, "Our party does not intend to take up anti-Soviet intentions in order to win so-called recognition, to obtain false respectability, or to prove our independence. . . We do not intend to enter the service of imperialism." Such a defense can only have been cold comfort to the Kremlin.

The battle for democracy in Portugal will largely be fought over 80,000 beds, according to tourism and foreign trade minister Jorge Campinos. The trouble is that at the moment nearly half these beds are being used by Angolan refugees and no one knows whether they will be willing to leave by the time the tourist season starts this year.

Freedom Of The Press

By Alan Barth

Editor's Note: This is the 11th in a series of 18 articles written for the nation's Bicentennial and exploring themes of the American Issues Forum. Mr. Barth, a long-time editorial writer for the Washington Post and author of several books on civil liberties, here discusses the role of a free press in a democracy, as seen by the Founding Fathers and as revealed in the struggle between the government and the press in the 1970s.

COURSES BY NEWSPAPER was developed by the University of California Extension, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. Copyright 1975 by The Regents of the University of California.

There is no better way to distinguish a free from an authoritarian society than to mark the role each assigns to the press in relation to the government. To authoritarians, the press, like every other institution, is a tool of the state; its function is to promote the purposes and policies of the rulers. In self-governing societies, the function of the press is to furnish the people with information necessary for them to rule themselves--and to keep official authority within its prescribed limits.

That extraordinary analyst of the American psyche, Alexis de Tocqueville, observed in the 1830s that an independent press constituted the chief "element of freedom in the modern world. A nation which is determined to remain free is therefore right in demanding the unrestrained exercise of this independence."

PRESS AS CENSOR

Independence is the key word here. Independence from governmental control is the linch-pin of freedom of the press. Far from wanting governmental censorship, Madison and Jefferson conceived of the press as a censor of government. Thus Thomas Jefferson wrote to President Washington in 1792, "No government ought to be without censors, and where the press is free, no one will." And although he had been mercilessly abused by the Federalist journals, as late as 1823 Jefferson continued to regard the press as "a tribunal of public opinion" that assured peaceful reform instead of revolution.

Two hundred years before our Bicentennial, the English press had achieved a considerable measure of freedom. Licensing by that time was a matter of the past; no longer was there any prior restraint in the form of direct censorship. But newspapers were still liable to punishment for publishing matter offensive to the authorities.

Plainly, as James Madison believed, English standards of press freedom did not harmonize with American opinion. Madison and other framers of the Constitution knew that a press released from responsibility might behave at times irresponsibly. They also knew that this possibility was the inescapable price of independence

Without unhindered freedom to print, the press could not perform its function in a democracy.

So the First Amendment, with its flat declaration--"Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech or of the press"--set a new standard for the new world. It made the press, in a significant sense, the most privileged of American institutions.

Today newspapers are big business enterprises operated for private profit, yet the First Amendment shields them almost absolutely from official interference or regulation. The same is true of those more modern electronic modes of journalism, radio, and television. Although necessarily subject to a selective official allocation of limited broadcasting channels, both to a large degree are protected against any official control over content.

This privilege, we need to remind ourselves, can never be taken for granted. Newspaper editors were fined and jailed for publishing material said to violate the Alien and Sedition Act of 1798; their cases never came before the Supreme Court because the act was repealed in 1800. And through most of the 19th century, despite numerous controversies on the limits of press freedom, the Court had no occasion to consider them. The First Amendment, it held, protected the press only from federal authority--not from action by the states.

MORE SAFEGUARDS

Then in 1931, in a case called Near v. Minnesota, the Court decided that the due process clause of the 14th Amendment safeguarded the liberty of press and speech from state action. "Miscreant purveyors of scandal," the Court conceded, might abuse the liberty, but the press of necessity had to retain its immunity "in dealing with official misconduct."

During the next three decades, the Court clarified its position in a series of important decisions. In the 1940s, it ruled that the press could not be summarily disciplined by judges for alleged contempt of court by publication (that is to say, by comments on current cases or on the judges conducting them) unless these comments could be shown to constitute a clear and present danger to the administration of justice.

And in the 1960s, it held in another series of cases that--regardless of a state's common or statutory libel laws--a public figure cannot collect damages for libel unless it can be shown that the report was not only false and damaging but also published maliciously or with the grossest negligence.

All these cases vindicated press freedom as essential to a political system designed to limit governmental power. In the 1970s, however, this succession of free press victories was slowed down if not halted. For the first time in American history a prior restraint on publication was countenanced, although not actually approved, by the Supreme Court. The event initiating the case was the publication of the so-called "Pentagon papers" by the New York Times and the Washington Post.

THE PENTAGON PAPERS

The Pentagon papers comprised a classified official account of the events leading up to American participation in the Vietnam war. Copies of this account, removed from the files of the Defense Department, were passed to the two newspapers which individually published parts of it. Claiming that this publication did serious injury to national security, the government sought to enjoin further publication of the material in the possession of the newspapers. While the Courts deliberated the government's plea, publication was, in fact, delayed; and prior restraint on publication was imposed.

As it turned out, the Court refused to sustain the government's position. Justice Hugo L. Black, in his concurring opinion, even commended the papers which had printed the Pentagon papers. By exposing deception in government, he said, they were serving the purpose "the Founding Fathers saw so clearly." Justice Potter Stewart made the same point to a law school audience: "The established American press in the past 10 years, and particularly in the past two years, has performed precisely the function it was intended to perform by those who wrote the First Amendment to the Constitution."

It should not be overlooked, however, that the words of the Court denying the government's claim were not without ambiguity. It simply concluded that the government had not met the "heavy burden of showing justification for the enforcement of such a restraint." The wording suggests quite obviously that such a restraint might be enforceable if that heavy burden could be met. The peril of prior restraint still apparently hangs over the press in America.

Other incursions on the independence of the press have occurred in recent years, most notably in connection with criminal trials. Judges zealous to protect the rights of defendants have sometimes issued "gag" orders, forbidding publication of certain kinds of evidence or testimony. Grand juries have occasionally summoned reporters as witnesses, even ordering them to disclose their confidential sources of information.

Probably the gravest peril to press freedom in America stems not so much from governmental attempts to curb the press as from complacency and timorousness on the part of publishers and broadcasters. Enjoying monopoly positions, they are increasingly reluctant to risk profits and security by getting embroiled in controversy. But can a free press be deemed free if it does not exercise its freedom?

"Fiddler" Proves To Be Delightful

By Doris White

Austin's Country Dinner Playhouse new production "Fiddler on the Roof" is an absolute delight. The caliber of the actors and their music is well above what the dinner theatergoer would expect.

Seymour Penzner does a touching job as Tevye, torn between the love for his daughters and the love for the traditions of his Jewish faith in a changing Russia in 1905.

The actor-singer Penzner is a seasoned performer with more than 20 Broadway productions behind him, including "Man of La Mancha" and "Paint Your Wagon."

Sausage Supper

Set For March 23

The St. Monica's Ladies made the final plans for their spring festival at their March meeting.

A sausage supper will be served beginning at 5 p.m. on March 27 at Simon George Hall. The plate will sell for $1.75. Games consisting of cake wheel, general store, fish pond, etc. will serve as entertainment. All plans were approved.

The ladies welcomed Mrs. Christine Holcombe, county extension agent, who gave a narration and film on the extension service and Texas A&M.

After the annual reports were given, the meeting was adjourned.

splendid in the role of Tevye's wife and mother of his three rather independent thinking daughters. The parts of the three daughters demand the actresses to be fine dancers and singers as well. They fulfill the parts most convincingly. The roles are played by Shelly Hamrick, Sally Salido and Syd McHugh.

The loud and talkative matchmaker, (who never quite makes a match) is played by the talented Jan Holeywell.

The quality of this musical production is outstanding. Musical director Yolanda Segovia has done a marvelous job of handling the score for "Fiddler."

The play is a winner and is well worth seeing. This popular Broadway musical, done as well as it could ever be, will be another smash hit for Mel Dacus and his Country Dinner Playhouse.

The Baptist Youth Choir will present the musical, "Tell It Like It Is," Sunday, March 21, 1976 at 6 p.m. in the sanctuary of the First Baptist Church. The public is invited.

Phil Smith, music and youth director of the First Baptist Church said the Youth Choir will be making a tour this summer, and the musical "Tell It Like It Is" will be one of their performances. He said that the choir of 30 young people have worked hard since Christmas and he hopes that many will attend this worship in song.

The Veterans Administration today announced that special memorial grave-stones and markers will be provided to families of deceased Medal of Honor winners as part of the county's Bicentennial program.

a nation's eternal remembrance of the selfless deeds of these brave Americans. The special markers will carry an enlarged representation of the Medal of Honor in gold leaf on marble or granite headstones and in bronze on the cast metal markets. The words "Medal of Honor" will also be high-lighted by one of these methods, Roudebush said.

The VA administrator said present headstones and grave markers will be replaced with the memorial devices only with the written approval of the next of kin or the person listed on the cemetery's records

Fed-Beef Supply Rises With Lower Prices Seen

CHICAGO Americans love beef... they eat more of it than any other food. And for smart shoppers now is the time to keep an eye on advertised specials and to stock up by purchasing an extra cut of beef for the freezer.

"Current attractive retail beef prices are the result of a shift in the beef supply," says John L. Huston, vice-president, Beef Program National Live Stock & Meat Board. "Consumers are noticing the quantity of fed-beef increasing. As this continues, retail prices will remain attractive providing the perfect opportunity for beef-loving Americans to stock up."

Huston noted that since last July when average retail price for Choice beef reached nearly $1.62/lb. (according to the USDA), prices have been on a steady decline to just under $1.42/lb. (average, first 3 weeks of Feb.) - a more than 12% decrease.

The easing of retail prices and the increasing quantities of fed-beef are direct results of last year's record feed grain crops. In 1972 about 78% of all marketed cattle were grain-fed. Grain was less expensive... in surplus. It was economical to feed grain to cattle to speed up production and improve quality.

In 1973-74 poor crops resulted in grain shortages and skyrocketing production costs for cattle feeders. Less than 50% of cattle marketed in 1975 were grain-fed. Feeders simply could not afford to buy the grain. Availability of fed-beef dropped off while non-fed varieties of beef made their first appearance in 20 years in some markets.

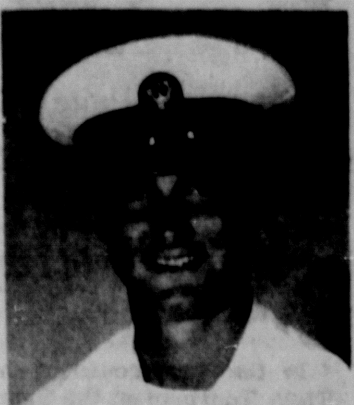

Following 1975's record harvest, cattle on feed figures began to increase last fall. The percentage of red-cattle could rise to 65% in 1976.

"Stable grain prices and lower grain costs reducing feeding costs by as much as 10% per pound of gain has encouraged feeders to increase the numbers of cattle in their feedlots," said Huston. "The build-up started last fall is resulting in more fed-beef and easing retail prices today."

"Current beef supplies and low cattle prices are causing a difficult cost-price squeeze for cattle feeders," said Huston. "This is, however, an excellent opportunity for consumers to save on their food budgets."

TP&L residential customers in 247 cities pay less for electricity than the people who live in Austin, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Los Angeles, New York, Philadelphia, San Antonio, and Washington, D. C. ... to name just a few.

COST OF 1,000 KW HR. RESIDENTIAL ELECTRICITY DECEMBER, 1975

In Corsicana and most other cities in the Texas Power & Light service area, 1,000 kilowatt-hours of residential electricity costs less than in most areas of Texas and the nation.

We're not overlooking the fact that in recent years the price of electricity has gone up everywhere, including the area served by TP&L. Skyrocketing costs of producing and supplying power have left TP&L and other companies no choice but to ask customers to pay more for their electric service.

Even so, the price of TP&L electricity today is far less than it would have been if we were not constantly working to hold down the price. One of the ways we're doing this is to build and operate generating plants which use lower cost lignite coal as fuel rather than natural gas. Two lignite plants are now producing power for TP&L customers and others are under construction and being planned.

For almost sixty-four years, Texas Power & Light has supplied dependable electric service at a fair price. We're working to keep it that way.

Smithville Pops Yoemen, 7-5

In the first round of the Elgin Tournament the Cameron Yoemen lost to Smithville when they got four runs on no hits in the third innings Thursday and won the decision over the Yoemen 7-5.

The Yoemen created more errors than runs and Smithville was able to hold off a last inning threat by the Yoemen to maintain their 2 run advantage.

The Yoemen played in a late game Friday and the final results of that Tournament will be in the Thursday edition of the Herald. The Yoemen now stand 4-3 for the season.

In Tuesday baseball action the Yoemen outpaced the Big Red Belton Tigers 5-3. Joey Mondrik hurled all seven innings fanning out 13 Tigers and giving up only 5 hits that were good for 2 runs.

Mondrik held the Tigers for three innings before they could produce any action. It took those three innings before the Tigers were able to go through their hitting lineup.

In the bottom half of the first inning the Yoemen came to bat with Dennis Hollas leading off. Hollas was walked, followed by Donald Hanel and Mondrik, who both struck out. Joe Smitherman walked on a hit pitch. Donald Komar was called out and retired the Yoemen.

The Tigers went down 1-2-3 with Mondrik throwing only 14 pitches from the mound. In Yoe's half, Gerry Heitman walked and was driven to second with a single by Stephen Hollas.

Mike Barr got a base on balls. Joe Reyes sacrificed Heitman in for the Yoemen's first run. Hollas and Hanel both struck out, retiring the Yoemen.

The Yoemen were able to maintain their one run lead through the third and gained two more runs in the fourth.

S. Hollas led off for the Yoemen and was called out on a strike-three call. Barr then was walked and Joe Reyes doubled bringing home Barr.

Hanel struck out and was followed by a play by Mondrik that drove in Reyes to give the Yoemen a 3-0 advantage.

In the top half of the 5th, the Tigers were able to bring in one run. Russell got a walk followed by a strike-out of Shepper.

Yoe catcher S. Hollas dropped the 3rd strike ball and tossed it to first baseman Smitherman who tagged Shepper. The ball flew out of Smitherman's glove and Shepper was safe at first. Russell had rounded the third base.

Russell was sacrificed into home before Mondrik retired the Tigers.

In the bottom half of the 5th the Yoemen were unable to score and entered the 6th inning with a 3-1 lead.

In the 6th the Yoemen held the Tigers who began to rally to only one run. Whitley hit a fly ball to right field that hit on the foul line and was called a fair ball. Mendoza singled, followed by a single by McGinnis. Whitley tried to round third on Mendoza's single and was pegged out when catcher S. Hollas unloaded down to third base man Mike Barr. Russell who had scored in the fifth hit a hard line drive that brought in Mendoza.

In the Yoe's half of the 6th D. Hollas led off and struck out followed by Hanel who singled. Mondrik doubled bringing in Hanel to third base. Smitherman then sacrificed Hanel for the fifth run. With two away Komar struck out.

In the 7th Mondrik allowed one hit and then struck three in a row out to clinch the 5-2 win over the Big Red machine.

R-Lott Downs Mart, 10-0

Rosebud-Lott pitcher C. E. Wolf tossed a near perfect game, driving up only one hit to guide the Cougars to a 10-0 win over the Mart Panthers in a Thursday game in intersectional baseball play.

The Cougars scored five runs in a first inning rally and then plugged in two more runs in the third and then piled on three more runs in the fourth. The ten run rule was invoked.

The Cougars now stand 6-4 for the season and will open their district play against the Yoemen April 6.

GREAT AMERICANS
GEORGE S. PATTON

General George S. Patton, pictured beneath a silver-blue sky, symbolizes American soldiers of all wars. With face shaded he is depicted in statue form watching protectively over future guardians of our country now attending the United States Military Academy at West Point. In full color this heroic poster, 2 by 3 feet in size is the first "Sculptograph" ever created. Patton, one of "The Super Soldiers," helped whip the Germans and conquered America's hearts at a time when heroes were important. May we regain that respect during our Nation's Bicentennial celebration. For information about how to obtain this magnificent poster, already a collector's item, write D.S.M., Inc., P.O. Box 614, New Canaan, Connecticut 06840.

TRAFFIC LIGHTS

SHOULD BE TURNED OFF AT DANGEROUS INTERSECTIONS TO SAVE ELECTRICITY. EVERYBODY SHOULD KNOW IT'S A DANGEROUS SPOT AND THAT OUGHT TO BE SUFFICIENT.

HIGHWAY POLICE

SHOULD STOP DRIVING UP AND DOWN THE HIGHWAYS. NO NEED TO CAUTION DRIVERS BY PATROLLING HIGHWAYS. DRIVERS KNOW THE LAW AND ALWAYS OBEY IT.

Snow Geese Do Their Bit For Spirit Of Detente

If snow geese had their way, detente would be here to stay.

For centuries, these beautiful waterfowl have been flying between breeding grounds in northeast Siberia and wintering places in British Columbia, Washington, and California.

But in the last few years freezing weather and hungry Arctic foxes have reduced a population of 120,000 birds to less than half in their only Soviet nesting place—Wrangel Island. The lonely Russian island lies in the East Siberian Sea about 500 miles from Alaska. These geese also nest in Canada.

Share Joint Concern

United by concern over the snow geese, scientists from both the Soviet Union and the United States have joined forces in studying the birds. The project is one of the first cooperative field efforts carried out under the US-USSR Agreement for Co-operation in the Field of Environmental Protection reached by the two countries in May 1972.

Supported by the National Geographic Society and the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Professor William J. L. Sladen of Johns Hopkins University coordinates the United States snow goose studies.

In collaboration with the Soviets, Americans, and Canadians, Dr. Sladen worked out protocols for coded color neckbands to identify individual birds.

"The relatively small population of Wrangel birds, which the Soviet agreed to dye red, mingles with much larger numbers of snow geese winging into North America from the Canadian Arctic," says Dr. Sladen who recently became the first American to visit the Russian island. "The neckbands and dye enable us to follow individuals so we can find out the best places to protect the Wrangel geese."

Colored Birds Red

The Soviets began their snow geese identification program on Wrangel in the summer of 1974 by dyeing 200 birds red and fitting 178 others with orange neckbands. About a third of the banded and dyed snow geese later were resighted in the United States, arousing curiosity of Canadian and American hunters and birdwatchers.

In the United States, 200 birds were fitted with green collars in Utah and California in the winter of 1974-75. Prof. Valdimir E. Jacoby of

He believes the geese should be protected from hunting for the time being in Alaska, British Columbia, and Washington. There is also a need to set aside refuges in these areas, he feels.

SNOW GOOSE decked out in neck band on Russia's remote Wrangel Island is admired by Dr. William J. L. Sladen of Johns Hopkins University. Supported by the National Geographic Society, Dr. Sladen is participating with the Russians in a study of the birds that fly between breeding grounds in northeast Siberia and wintering places in California, Washington, and British Columbia.

the USSR Academy of Sciences participated in the banding. One of the birds he banded was seen later with three goslings on Wrangel Island.

Additional bandings were made on Wrangel when Dr. Sladen visited the Russian outpost last summer. He reported that 1975 was the first good year for the rearing of young since 1970. "The Soviets hope that every effort will be made to protect these migratory birds during their winter visits to North America so that as many as possible will return to bolster an aging population," Dr. Sladen added.
